How to choose between Adobe Photoshop Elements and Photoshop Adobe Photoshop Elements is designed for home users. It is designed and intended to be used by non-professionals. You will be able to complete many basic projects and features in Photoshop Elements while only some basic projects can be completed in Photoshop. If you are a professional and tend to use Photoshop very often, choose Photoshop Elements instead. In spite of the cheaper price tag, there are several pros to choosing Photoshop Elements over Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop Elements doesn't have a watermark Adobe Photoshop Elements doesn't have a watermark You don't need a watermark to protect your image from someone else's use and reuse of your image. Many professional designers use Photoshop to work on website designs. The moment your designer saves your image, that's when your designer, webmaster and whoever else have exclusive rights to that image. If you have a design and you want to show it off, don't add a watermark on it. If you want to protect your image from unauthorized use, watermark the image yourself. You can apply a watermark when you want it to. You can easily do so by choosing the watermark option on the Layers panel. It's a lot easier to undo a watermark than an image mask Adobe Photoshop Elements doesn't have a watermark A watermark isn't a good way to protect your image from unauthorized use. If it is the image you want to use in your portfolio, you need to choose another way to protect that image. When you mark your images, you can easily remove the mark and your image is still protected. If you accidentally apply a marker, it's a lot easier to remove the mark. For example, you can choose Undo or using the Eraser tool on the toolbox. HMS Hindustan (1921) HMS Hindustan was an sloop of the Royal Navy that served in the Mediterranean Sea during the Second World War. Hindustan was built by Harland & Wolff of Belfast. She was launched on 2 August 1921, spent a few years at Birkenhead Naval Base, and was commissioned in the Royal Navy in 1924. She was the last of the seventy-three County-class ships to be completed, taking an extra year because the only boats of the class taken up by the British Admiralty in the 1930s were "bleeding" ("in need of repair"). She served until 1931, when she was placed in reserve. She was scrapped in 1943. And for the past few years, I've found myself recommending it to more people than you might realize (I would love to know if there is an "Anime Expert" at any point in a person's life!). It's a great place for a first experience with a Japanese convention, but it's also a great place to meet anime fans from all over the world as well as experience and learn about Japanese culture. I've talked about this several times in the past, but I just saw the new Sailor Moon Crystal shows premier (live, for the first time anywhere!) and I still can't get over how amazing it looks. When I first saw the new Sailor Moon anime movie opening, I came out of the theatre and immediately started thinking "that looks crazy good". That's just an image from the Sailor Moon Crystal opening, but I'm going to go ahead and tell you that there was also a Sailor Moon Crystal in the same room as the production. Of course there was, and it was amazing. When I first got to the event and met up with other people who were attending, I had an instant sense of camaraderie and tons of wonderful people I got to meet. Then we all went into the room to watch the first episode
