One such form of dispenser is disclosed in co-pending U.S. patent application Ser. No. 354,631, filed May 21, 1989, which discloses a dispenser housing having a flexible cover sheet which is attached to the dispenser housing. The frame is held in place by the sheet which is attached to the frame by means of circumferential holes and fixed circumferential flanges that are provided on the frame. When a compressible material is placed within the dispenser housing, the frame or frame insert is forced upwardly thereby moving the frame into a frame pocket located in the cover sheet. Such a dispenser is not satisfactory for several reasons. The rigid frame and cover sheet are provided as a unitary structure. In order to provide a limited degree of flexibility in the dispenser, circumferential holes are formed in the frame. The manufacture of such holes is time consuming and increases costs. An additional problem arises in that the dispenser can not be easily assembled with or mounted to the outer structure of the dispenser. Accordingly, an improved dispenser is desired.Q: How does one recover a X-Men's head from an urn? In Marvel Comics, Jean Grey is mentioned a lot.
