Transcript for Fresh hail falls across parts of western US In the US a rainstorm this afternoon some showers dotting the west and with dry conditions out west this weakening system is now whipping up a dust storm. Bill has the story. Reporter: In the California desert we've been watching this system for hours. A mile of road getting covered in up to a half an inch of dust. Take a look at this. It's one of the worst we have seen this year. We are in the middle of the winter -- Reporter: But it's not snow, no white stuff here. This is sand. This is the worst day of the year. I've been here 10 years. I've never seen it like this. Reporter: In Palm Springs we've been told to stay inside because of this thick fog and black sand. We had every reason to believe this would be a blow over, but this storm is expected to shift west for overnight rains. This is the first time ever this desert has been blanketed in black sand. Let's hope the rains will come and clear it all up. Reporter: Bill, thank you. In the west today, some welcome moisture but in the middle of the country, drought. Heavy rains over the weekend watered up states in the midwest, boosting hopes for a significant end to this dry spell. Here we go. NBC news, the weather. This transcript has been automatically
