In a randomized trial, captopril (0.7 to 5 mg/kg) was given for 8 weeks to 23 patients with congestive heart failure. Heart rate fell significantly in patients given captopril in a dose of 1.5 mg/kg. Patients who received 0.7 mg/kg of captopril failed to show any improvement in ventricular function. A further 7 patients with congestive heart failure were followed for 12 months on captopril therapy. Angiotensin-converting enzyme inhibition was found to be effective in long-term therapy.

Q: How to automatically re-refresh/validate/initialize tableView after showing a modal view (with Swift)? I am using a button to open a modal view, which contains a tableView. When the user taps a tableView row, a screen will be shown, and the previous screen (that contained a tableView) will be hidden. However, the tableView still displays the same data. I am wondering how can I automatically reset the tableView's data to match the current data?

A: Set your tableView.reloadData() method to be called when your modal view controller is dismissed to reset the tableView.

let vc = YourModalViewController() //present modal view controller self.presentViewController(vc, animated: true, completion: nil) //set reloadData when dismissed vc.dismissViewControllerAnimated(true, completion: { 6d1f23a050
