I'm trying to make the development process a little nicer for myself by defining and writing my own functions and decorators. However, every time I try to write a file to import my own functions, it complains that it cannot import. I've gone so far as to redefine sys.setprofile to prevent python from buffering the output, but I still have to include the entire code to get it to work. The question, then, is whether there's a package somewhere that includes both a function and a decorator? A: You can do like this import sys import imp def my_decorator(func): def wrapper(*args, kw): sys.setprofile(lambda *args, kw: None) result = func(*args, kw) c6a93da74d
