Nice review but after upgrading to LR5.2 RC I think performance is better than with LR4. Working on a project with 1500 D800 NEFs my impression is that the smart previews increase speed while working in the Developer mode – in Lib. mode however everything slows because the JPEG previews are used. So far I am not sure how the Jpegs are used as previews when you have the smart previews (DNGs) available. But have to say that I am happy with 5.2 RC although I will say bye-bye to LR the day they make it part of CC. Regards! Writing this review has been great to learn about the new Adobe Photoshop, but a real letdown after trying it. LR5.2 did a great job at recognizing when the files have changed without being patched. Now the new Photoshop represents a false start. There is no logical approach to file management that the new Photoshop is compatible with. ….As much as I like the new Photoshop, I feel like I am starting over with a brand new version of Photoshop. … I look forward to future file management improvements, but not this week.

Thanks for all the time you and your team have put into this. Thanks again! Lightroom could also benefit from a bit of tweaking and optimization from the company. Lightroom's star rating can take some tweaking from time to time and maybe even be tweaked to reflect the average rating rather than a rating from one set of users. Right now, Lightroom uses star ratings to estimate your experience of using the application, but it doesn't factor in the number of stars that each individual user has earned.

Don't let the number of steps in these operations discourage you; the idea is that steps can be broken down, reordered, or performed in alternate sequences to eliminate unnecessary steps in your workflow. For example, Photoshop Elements makes it easy to add a white border, even in a composition containing an image that's larger than the active area, by pressing one keystroke. The content-aware tools Auto-Blend and Auto-Enhance allow you to easily alter a photo's brightness, saturation, and color by blurring unwanted areas of the photo to match surrounding elements. Ensuring that your image is correct in the most minute details can be difficult. Photoshop's "Gradient Fill" feature lets you pick up the colors of a photo and fills in the colors throughout the image, letting you apply exactly the right shade to all faces, hair, and clothing. In addition to adjusting colors, you can create different cell shades to adjust individual hues and in darker areas, you can adjust the brightness to make flat colors or dark gray areas easier on the eyes. Adobe Photoshop allows you to easily perform such functions on entire images. For example, an upcoming feature may allow you to use one image as the base image for entire folders of different compositions. The Rubber Stamp feature enables you to define the area you want to embed into a new document, add a custom shape, apply a color or other preset effect, and even use the same pattern when placing it in different locations.
