I have a method that uses a key to decrypt a string. In order to determine whether the data is encrypted or not, I do the following: bool IsEncrypted = true; //... MyPlainText = Decrypt(MyPlainText, EncryptionKey); But I am wondering if this would be an acceptable way to determine whether the data is encrypted or not. A: A good way to do this is to look at the string length. If the string length is longer than the encrypted string length (which will be the same as the original string length), then it is encrypted. This method has the benefit of being easy to implement. If you want more control over the encryption, you'll want to implement your own method using the symmetric encryption algorithms provided in the.NET framework.
